girl power

“Volunteering and helping people, it’s just what I do for fun,” says Cassady. When she’s not tutoring special needs students or working toward her Girl Scout Gold Award, this Northwest Guilford senior is traveling the country on behalf of Students Against Violence Everywhere as co-vice chairwoman for its National Youth Advisory Council. The flag team captain and yearbook co-editor spoke in front of Congress this summer about the need for peer-led school violence prevention programs like SAVE, which works to encourage safe teen driving and prevent suicide, drug abuse and student bullying.

“If someone’s being bullied, you have to speak up, or else it will never end.”
